SAMPLE

The Scale and the Bridge: Al-Mizan wa

As-Sirat Al-Mizan wa As-Sirat (الميزان والصراط) in the Quran

Aira Aurora

Free sample: Introduction & Chapter 1

putrabooks.github.io

Contents

Disclaimer

Introduction: The Weighing and the Crossing

Chapter 1: The Scale — Al-Mizan and the Weighing of Deeds

Chapter 2: The Weight — What Makes the Scale Heavy or Light

Chapter 3: The Bridge — As-Sirat and the Crossing

Chapter 4: The Crossing — The Speed and the Slowness

Chapter 5: The Light — The Illumination on the Bridge

Chapter 6: The Fall — Those Who Slip from the Bridge

Chapter 7: The Prophets and the Crossing — The Models of Passage

Chapter 8: The Scale and the Bridge Together — The Justice and the Passage

Chapter 9: The Lesson — Living for the Weight and the Crossing

Chapter 10: The Recensions of the Weighing — The Other Scale-Verses

Chapter 11: The Atom-Weight and the Scene — The Smallest Entries on the Record

Frequently Asked Questions

Glossary

This free sample contains the Introduction and Chapter 1. The complete book contains the full contents above.

Introduction: The Weighing and the Crossing

The Quran describes two critical stages of the Day of Judgment: the Scale — Al-Mizan — on which the deeds are weighed, and the Bridge — As- Sirat — over which the souls must cross. The Quran says: "And We place the scales of justice for the Day of Resurrection, so no soul will be treated unjustly at all. And if there is even the weight of a mustard seed, We will bring it forth. And sufficient are We as accountant" (21:47). The Scale is the measure — the measure that is precise, the measure that is just, and the measure that is complete. The Bridge is the passage — the passage that is tested, the passage that is challenged, and the passage that determines the final destination.

The word Al-Mizan (الميزان) comes from the root W-Z-N, which carries the meanings of weighing, balancing, and measuring. The verb wazana means to weigh — to measure the weight, to determine the heaviness, and to assess the substance. The noun Mizan signifies the scale — the instrument of the weighing, the tool of the measurement, and the device of the justice. Al-Mizan is the Scale of the Day — the Scale that weighs the deeds, the Scale that measures the choices, and the Scale that determines the weight of the life.

The word As-Sirat (الصراط) comes from the root S-R-T, which carries the meanings of a path, a way, and a road. The noun Sirat signifies the path — the path that is traversed, the way that is walked, and the road that is crossed. As-Sirat is the Bridge over the Fire — the Bridge that is the passage, the Bridge that is the test, and the Bridge that is the crossing from the Day to the destination.

This book — the eighteenth in the Hereafter sub-series and the fourth of the Stages books — explores the Scale and the Bridge as the Quran describes them. It examines the Scale and the weighing of deeds, what makes the Scale heavy or light, the Bridge and the crossing, the speed and the slowness of the crossing, the light that illuminates the Bridge, the fall of those who slip, the prophetic models of the passage, the Scale and the Bridge together, and the lesson — how to live for the weight and the crossing.

The first chapter begins with the Scale itself — what Al-Mizan means, how the Quran describes it, and what the Scale reveals about the Day.

Chapter 1: The Scale — Al-Mizan and the Weighing of Deeds

The word Al-Mizan (الميزان) comes from the root W-Z-N, which carries the meanings of weighing, balancing, and measuring. The verb wazana means to weigh — to measure the weight, to determine the heaviness, and to assess the substance. The noun Mizan signifies the scale — the instrument of the weighing, the tool of the measurement, and the device of the justice. Al-Mizan is the Scale of the Day — the Scale that weighs the deeds, the Scale that measures the choices, and the Scale that determines the weight of the life. The name tells the listener: this is the Day when the substance is measured — the substance of the deeds, the substance of the choices, and the substance of the life. The person who has substance is heavy, and the person who has no substance is light.

The Quran uses the word Mizan in multiple contexts. As the Scale of the Day: "And We place the scales of justice for the Day of Resurrection, so no soul will be treated unjustly at all" (21:47). As the measure of the deeds: "And the Scale on that Day will be the truth. So as for one whose scales are heavy, he will be in a pleasant life. And as for one whose scales are light, his home will be Hawiyah" (101:6-9). As the balance of the creation: "And the heaven He raised and imposed the balance, that you not transgress within the balance. And establish weight in justice and do not make deficient the balance" (55:7-9). Each usage places Al-Mizan as the instrument of the justice — the justice that measures, the justice that weighs, and the justice that balances.

The Scale is the justice — the justice that does not wrong, the justice that does not cheat, and the justice that does not deceive. The Quran says: "so no soul will be treated unjustly at all" (21:47). The justice is the precision: the precision that weighs to the atom, the precision that measures to the mote, and the precision that counts to the mustard seed. The justice is the fairness: the fairness that gives every person the exact weight of their deeds, the fairness that does not add and does not subtract, and the fairness that is the truth. The justice is the completeness: the completeness that weighs every deed, every word, and every intention — the deeds that were done, the words that were spoken, and the intentions that were held.

The Quran says: "And We place the scales of justice for the Day of Resurrection" (21:47). The scales — in the plural — are the multiple measures of the Day. The scales that weigh the good and the evil, the scales that weigh the truth and the falsehood, and the scales that weigh the faith and the denial. The scales are the comprehensiveness: the comprehensiveness that measures every dimension of the person, the comprehensiveness that weighs every aspect of the life, and the comprehensiveness that accounts every facet of the choice. The scales are the diversity: the diversity of the measures that apply to the diversity of the deeds — the scale of the prayer, the scale of the charity, the scale of the fasting, and the scale of every deed.

The Quran says: "And the Scale on that Day will be the truth" (101:6). The truth of the Scale is the reality — the reality that is the weight, the reality that is the measure, and the reality that is the substance. The truth is the honesty: the honesty that does not lie, the honesty that does not distort, and the honesty that does not misrepresent. The truth is the clarity: the clarity that shows the person exactly what they have done, the clarity that shows the person exactly what they have earned, and the clarity that shows the person exactly what they deserve. The truth of the Scale is the opposite of the illusion — the illusion of this world that made the person think they were something when they were nothing, and the truth of the Scale that shows the person exactly what they are.

The Quran says: "And if there is even the weight of a mustard seed, We will bring it forth. And sufficient are We as accountant" (21:47). The mustard seed is the smallest — the smallest that is not overlooked, the smallest that is not forgotten, and the smallest that is not ignored. The mustard seed is the precision: the precision that counts the smallest good and the smallest evil, the precision that weighs the lightest deed and the lightest choice, and the precision that measures the thinnest intention and the thinnest thought. The mustard seed is the mercy: the mercy that does not overlook the smallest good — the good that the person forgot, the good that the person dismissed, and the good that the person undervalued. The mustard seed is the justice: the justice that does not overlook the smallest evil — the evil that the person dismissed, the evil that the person minimized, and the evil that the person forgot.

The Scale is connected to the Record — the Record that contains the deeds and the Scale that weighs them. The Quran says: "And the record will be placed, and you will see the criminals fearful of what is in it" (18:49). The Record is the content, and the Scale is the measure. The Record is the evidence, and the Scale is the judgment. The Record is the list, and the Scale is the weight. The person whose Record is full of good has a heavy Scale, and the person whose Record is full of evil has a light Scale. The Scale does not create the weight — the Scale reveals the weight. The weight was created by the person in this life, and the Scale merely measures what was already there.

The Scale is the final measure — the measure that is the last, the measure that is the definitive, and the measure that is the conclusive. The person who lived in the illusion of the weight — the illusion that their deeds were heavy, the illusion that their choices were substantial, and the illusion that their life was meaningful — discovers the truth at the Scale. The truth that the deeds were light, the truth that the choices were empty, and the truth that the life was weightless. The person who lived in the fear of the weightlessness — the fear that their deeds were not enough, the fear that their choices were not sufficient, and the fear that their life was not heavy — discovers the mercy at the Scale. The mercy that the deeds were heavier than they thought, the mercy that the choices were more substantial than they believed, and the mercy that the life was more meaningful than they imagined.

End of free sample. The full book is available at putrabooks.github.io